Look at what we learned this week!

This week was all about gingerbread and the color green. We read multiple variations of The Gingerbread Man and discovered that, depending on the author, each story is just a little bit different. We even decorated our own gingerbread people and a gingerbread man book to keep in our classroom!

The color green was emphasized this week. We had a magazine hunt for items that were green, just like we did with the color red!

You may have noticed that it is freezing cold outside. We thought of all the things that we like to do outside when it snows, like build snowmen, make snow angels or snow forts. We decided that we would paint our favorite winter activities since it was too cold to go outside! Then we hung them up in our bathroom :)

In the spirit of Christmas we also decorated stockings to hang on our class bulletin board and played some winter games that helped us continue to learn our colors and shapes.

Many of you have asked about our Christmas plans in preschool. I have decided not to do a gift exchange in order to save some money for everyone and to eliminate the hassle of trying to find a gift for everyone. Instead, we will have some fun activities to do on Thursday and make a snack.

Show and Tell: Your child is welcome to bring their favorite toy on Wednesday for show and tell!
